

Christmas Baking

Every Christmas my family does a lot of baking. This year, my RELATIVE is visiting from PLACE, and decided to bake something special for us. I don't think RELATIVE bakes very often. He/she told us how ADJECTIVE it would be and how we would like it so much we'd want to come back for ORDINAL NUMBER helpings.

First, he/she measured out some PLURAL FOOD NOUN. Then he/she mixed in some PLURAL FOOD NOUN. So far, so ADJECTIVE. Then he/she poured in a whole NOUN of FOOD NOUN. That's when we began to VERB. He/she kept adding different ingredients, including: FOOD NOUN, FOOD NOUN, FOOD NOUN, and FOOD NOUN. That was ADJECTIVE enough, but then we watched in wonder as he/she added a spoonful of NOUN and a cup of PLURAL NOUN. Then he/she poured the mixture into a NOUN and popped it into the oven. He/she set a timer for NUMBER minutes.

While it baked, the house took on an aroma of SMELLY NOUN. Our stomachs began to VERB , ADVERB. We waited with an increasing sense of QUALITATIVE NOUN.

Finally, it was finished. When RELATIVE pulled it out of the oven, it looked a little like a NOUN. Once it cooled, it took on a(n) ADJECTIVE hue, a little like ADJECTIVE , NOUN. RELATIVE tried to slice it, but it was so ADJECTIVE, it just PAST-TENSE VERB. Once it was served, we each took a taste. I watched my little brother take a(n) ADJECTIVE bite. He made a(n) ADJECTIVE face, but he always does that. I tapped it with my TOOL. It made a(n) ADJECTIVE sound. Then I tasted it. It PAST-TENSE VERB in my mouth. I was surprised—it tasted just like NOUN, but a little COMPARATIVE NOUN.

When RELATIVE told us he/she'd be happy to make us some more, I PAST-TENSE VERB with EMOTION.
